As an expert in workers compensation issues, Chrissy has extensive experience advising on how the Return to Work Act 2014 (SA), and its predecessor the Workers Rehabilitation and Compensation Act 1986 (SA), apply to injured worker claims in South Australia. With nearly 20 years' experience, having practised on 'both sides of the fence', Chrissy has specialised in workers compensation law since being admitted into practice in 2003.

Her invaluable experience understanding the different perspectives of all the key parties involved in this challenging field, and her ability to develop relationships with all stakeholders in the litigation process, help her efficiently manage and resolve disputes.

Chrissy has provided representation for ReturnToWorkSA and its agents Employers Mutual Limited and Gallagher Bassett for most of her career. She has also acted for several self-insured and self-managed employers, as well as the Crown. She has advised clients on their strategies for handling workers compensation claims and represented them in disputes in the South Australian Employment Tribunal, including proceedings in the Full Court of the Supreme Court of South Australia and the South Australian Court of Appeal.

She has acted on a series of significant scheme matters under the Return to Work Act 2014 (SA) and is no stranger to providing detailed and forensic advice, tailored to achieving the optimum results for her clients.

Despite Chrissy's passion for workers compensation matters, she has appeared in the Magistrates Court and District Court jurisdiction, having also practiced in CTP, public liability, medical negligence, and superannuation law.

In addition to legal representation, Chrissy has provided training to ReturnToWorkSA and its agents on topics relating to the Return to Work Act 2014 and very much enjoys mentoring and developing young practitioners.

Chrissy is fluent in Greek.
