Claire began working with Tracey Kerrigan as a Law Clerk in 2001 prior to her admission in 2002 and has remained in the employment, workplace, and personal injuries jurisdictions ever since. Claire has made the most of opportunities to work on “both sides of the fence” in that time. She has practised in a number of areas of civil litigation and industrial law during her career.

Claire provides advice and representation to registered employers of all sizes, self-insured employers, public entities, and insurance companies on a range of workplace issues including workers compensation, unfair dismissal, sexual harassment, bullying and discrimination matters.

She runs a busy and vibrant practice which involves hands-on advice in the working environment if necessary, including in-house services.

Claire has been involved in a number of committees and has contributed to the ongoing parliamentary changes in the jurisdiction. Claire is able to assist in developing and rolling out training for employers and the management of policies and procedures, as well as claims management and statutory framework.

Claire has been acknowledged several times in Doyle’s Guide as a leading practitioner in the areas of workers compensation and employment law.
