Lauren was admitted to the Supreme Court of South Australia in 2023.

Prior to this, she built a solid foundation in civil law while serving as a Court Officer at the Adelaide Magistrates Court. In that role, she gained practical courtroom experience working alongside various magistrates, enhancing her understanding of court procedures and civil litigation dynamics.

After gaining admission, Lauren launched her legal career at a boutique law firm where she embraced a wide-ranging caseload. She developed particular expertise in personal injury and debt recovery, refining her skills in both negotiation and courtroom advocacy. This early stage of her career helped her build a reputation for handling complex client matters efficiently and effectively.

In February 2025, Lauren joined KJK Legal, where she now focuses on workers' compensation and debt recovery. At KJK Legal, she leverages her diverse legal background to support clients in navigating compensation claims and liability disputes. Her work frequently brings her before the South Australian Employment Tribunal, the Magistrates Courts, and the District Court, where she represents clients in statutory proceedings and contested hearings.
